Work History

Associate Professor in Occupational Psychology, University of Greenwich. Dec 2020-

I am currently responsible for the development of a new Occupational Psychology MSc and providing academic leadership within the school. As part of my role I supervise and mentor a range of UG, PG and PhD students. I have a number of teaching responsibilities, currently leading modules on individual differences, in addition to a number of contributions based upon my expertise in Meta-Psychology, Open Science, and Occupational Psychology.

Associate Professor in Occupational Psychology, Coventry University. Sep 2014 – Dec 2020.

As Programme Director for the Business and Occupational Psychology Team, I was responsible for the management and supervision of the Occupational Psychology and Business and Organisational Psychology MSc courses and staff. As part of my role I led several course reviews, curriculum changes and pedagogical research projects, and supervised two applied PhD students. I led academic duties, including teaching and research, on both Undergraduate and Postgraduate psychology courses.

External Examiner for Anglia Ruskin University via Arden University, Feb 2020-Present

I am currently an External Examiner for the Psychology programmes delivered by Arden University at Anglia Ruskin. My main responsibilities include evaluating samples of assessed work, supporting development of the programmes and delivery team, and providing reports on the standards and processes of student work, programmes, and their delivery.

External Reviewer for Course Development, Northumbria University, November 2020

I was employed as an external reviewer for the course development of the Occupational Psychology MSc at Northumbria University. My main responsibilities included evaluating prepared module documentation, providing feedback, and liaising with the course team to refine and improve proposed practices.

Panel Member for International Programme Validation, Northampton University, March 2020.

I was employed as a panel member for a Validation and Programme Collaboration event for three Psychology Masters programmes due to be delivered by the Columbian Institute for Research and Psychology (CIRP), Sri Lanka. Role involved responsibilities equivalent to External Examiner.

Senior Associate Tutor at the Institute for Advanced Teaching and Learning, University of Warwick, Jan 2017-Feb 2020.

I deliver part of a specialist interdisciplinary module on Humour/Laughter. I focus upon the psychological perspectives on humour, based upon my research focussing upon psychometric and discursive approaches, navigating the interactions between humour and psychological states. Further details available here.

Editor of 'Emotions, Risk and Decision-Making: Applying Occupational Psychology to the Fire Service', Palgrave Macmillan. Sep 2017 – April 2019.

I was lead editor of a collection of exemplar Occupational Psychology-based research projects conducted in the context of the Fire and Rescue Service. The book provides students, trainees, practitioners and fire personnel with an overview of the latest research on a range of topics, including resilience, well-being, and operational preparedness, informing the policies, procedures and practices of those working on the ground in the Fire Service.

Director of Sawdust Rehab, a Social Enterprise. Jan 2017 – Dec 2018

I was lead director of Sawdust Rehab: a joint Social Enterprise venture between Coventry University and HMP Rye Hill. I led a multidisciplinary team, aiming to showcase workshop craftsmanship to benefit the local community and the Shelter UK and Myton Hospice charities, whilst also providing a rehabilitative and employability benefit for the prisoners and students involved.

Link Tutor for the Business Psychology MSc at the Colombo Institute for Research and Psychology, Sri Lanka. Sep 2014 – Jan 2017.

I was responsible for duties equivalent to that of an External Examiner, mostly surrounding ensuring standards of quality are maintained. My duties included an annual visit.

Research Expertise

My PhD focussed upon Emotional Intelligence, using qualitative, questionnaire, and experimental methods to clarify content domain based upon existing theoretical frameworks of personality and cognitive ability. More broadly, my passion is for research surrounding the social and affect-related aspects of work, including emotional intelligence and humour. I am very passionate about individual differences, open-science, and research methods more broadly and I adopt a variety of methods and analysis types ranging from Cluster Analysis to Structural Equation Modelling to Framework and Discourse Analysis within both teaching and research.

Latest Awards

Extra Mile Award in the Student Led Teaching Awards

Nominated by students, April 2021.

FIRE Magazine/Gore Research Excellence Award

Winner of the Research Excellence Award, based upon a presentation of work on the development of a Situational Judgement Test for West Midlands Fire Service. The presentation was awarded for "revolutionising the theoretical understanding of operational performance and driving significant changes in practice". The award included a £1000 prize for future research, which went towards the commercialisation of the measure. More details are available here.

Nominated for the Indigogold Work Psychology Innovation Award

Nominated for the Indigogold Work Psychology Innovation Award for my research exploring the applicability of three models of affect-related individual differences for the prediction of individual-level organisational outcomes. The project includes two samples (n=595, n=245), pre-registered analysis plans, and with data and materials openly available for the second sample.

Selected Research Funding

US Department of Defence via the Center for Open Science ($5000)

I led one direct replication project, and a number of computational reproducibility projects, as part of the wider SCORE initiative which was designed to assess and improve the credibility of social and behavioural science research. Due to institutional barriers, much of the budget allocated to this project was unclaimed.

West Midlands Fire Service. 2017-2019 (£1,500,000)

I co-led a five-year long project for the development of an innovative industry-linked Leadership Development Programme in conjunction with West Midlands Fire Service.

Coventry University. 2017 (£1,500)

I led a team of students, colleagues, Rye Hill Prison employees, and other stakeholders, to secure funding to develop a business plan for a joint social enterprise with HMP Rye Hill. Having completed the preliminary work and market research, a sustainable and socially-beneficial organisation entitled 'Sawdust Rehab' was created.

West Midlands Fire Service. 2016-2017 (£100,000)

I led the development and validation of a Situational Judgement Tool to assess Operational Preparedness. In addition to the GORE Research Excellence Award for driving significant changes to policy and practice, this project has led to the commercialisation of a training and development tool.

Coventry University. May 2015 (£2,950)

I led the development of an integrated model of affective individual differences, unifying existing personality and cognitive/intelligence frameworks with novel aspects of Emotional Intelligence, towards more theoretically-appropriate applications of Emotional Intelligence for outcomes such as job performance and employability.

West Midlands Fire Service. December 2013 (£14,400)

In this exploratory project, I led the assessment of the behavioural patterns and cognitive decision-making of persons within a domestic fire scenario.

Error Detection and Correction

Whilst many consider science to be self-correcting, we all have a responsibility to ensure the work we produce and engage with is robust. As such, I have led a number of investigations into published works to identify and correct errors.

The first error identified has resulted in minor but meaningful changes to the conclusions drawn of a meta-analysis, through a corrigendum.

My current investigation is looking to correct effect sizes presented in an influential work on diversity training. The required corrections are due forthwith and make meaningful differences to the conclusions drawn for this influential piece.
